McKesson Medical-Surgical Adopts DocOrigin Document Generation Software

Medical distribution leader updates its forms software with innovative next-gen solution from Eclipse

February 4, 2015 – Cape Coral, Florida. Eclipse Corporation, a provider of enterprise document generation solutions, announced today that McKesson Medical-Surgical Inc., an affiliate of the oldest and largest health care services company in the nation (McKesson Corporation NYSE: MCK), has adopted DocOrigin 3.0 to support critical enterprise document generation systems.

McKesson Medical-Surgical plays an integral role in American health care. The business is the largest distributor of medical-surgical supplies to the U.S. ambulatory and post-hospital healthcare markets. As a result, document generation systems play a critical role in its performance.

“The McKesson business unit needed a next-generation solution to replace our current print program,” said Don Fauth, Vice President, Application Development. McKesson needed a more modern and efficient solution. “We process large volumes of print, especially at peak times,” explained Fauth. “With our current software we sometimes experience a slow-down that can impact our shipments to customers. Re-platforming our critical print processes was an essential change.”

McKesson Medical-Surgical chose DocOrigin as the solution. According to Jeff Gary, Business Development Manager at Eclipse, DocOrigin was uniquely suited to provide the level of capability and performance that McKesson Medical-Surgical needed. “Many of their applications are complicated. For example, their packing slips have 108 sub-forms, so key criteria for success was to increase speed, ease migration, and retain the current functionality across all the applications and systems,” said Gary.

“Several months ago, McKesson Medical-Surgical began the search for a replacement for their enterprise forms and document generation. They were hoping to find a single solution which would work across all departments and replace multiple document generation packages,” said Steve Luke, CEO of Eclipse. “McKesson Medical-Surgical evaluated a number of possible solutions before determining that DocOrigin’s performance, features, and ease of use made DocOrigin the best choice.”

McKesson Medical-Surgical was also interested in the dynamic promotion capabilities, messaging and 3D charting features included with DocOrigin. DocOrigin was selected after months of evaluations, and Fauth believes this will be a valuable enterprise tool beyond the scope of the original project. “We were mainly searching for a replacement solution for packing slips, but we can also use DocOrigin for other solutions to business forms. We plan to introduce DocOrigin to McKesson Medical- Surgical subsidiaries as well.” said Fauth.
